Examples of what ERAS considers fraudulent activity include:

- Omission of education extension
- Omission of previous residency training
- Submission of fraudulent supporting documents
- Tampering with content of LoRs
- Plagiarized personal statements

Plagiarizing or falsifying information can have a negative and lasting impact on an applicant's future career. It's simply not worth it.

ERAS is committed to supporting a high standard of integrity throughout the application process for residency and fellowship positions. Unethical behavior is strongly discouraged and will be thoroughly investigated and addressed appropriately.
